Developments Go Local

May 11, 2018

Whether it’s through design, cuisine or amenities, developments across the globe are now drawing inspiration from their local surroundings and culture.
Native Suggests Names for Residences
Each of the three residence buildings at Timbers Kaua‘i – Ocean Club & Residences were named with the help of native Hawaiian Hualani Duncan, a warm-hearted local woman with a deep understanding of the importance of “what’s in a name.” The Kaiholo building, which rests close the cliff’s edge with prime ocean views, stems from “kai” (ocean, sea) and “holo” (current, flow) and represents guiding travelers to the effervescent shores of nearby Running Waters Beach and Kalapaki Beach. The Maliulā building stems from “maliu” (look upon with favor, entreat) and “lā” (sun, warmth) represents the warmest aloha to welcome residents. Lāola stems from “lā” (sun, warmth) and “ola” (life, health, well-being), representing a fresh sense of life that the residence building will offer its owners.