There's so much to love about Hawaii as a family-friendly travel destination. It's domestic—so no passport is required—and its islands are easily accessible by way of frequent nonstop flights from many major metros on the mainland.

On top of these checkmarks in the ease and convenience column, Hawaii is known for its otherworldly natural beauty and its mild year-round climate. Plus, many of its resorts are built specifically with families in mind, catering to groups of all ages with spacious accommodations, kids clubs and cultural programming, lavish pools and gardens, and impeccable beachfront bliss.

On this list, you'll find four of the five Four Seasons properties located in the state (save for the adults-only Sensei, sister property to the family paradise Lanai), offering some of the absolute best all-inclusive kids club programming we've come across. Plus, there are posh options from Rosewood, Andaz, 1 Hotels, Luxury Collection, Auberge—and an array of boutique brands.

Every hotel below provides world-class service in an ideal location—just waiting for you and your family to check in.

TIMBERS KAUAI AT HOKUALA

This family-friendly resort community spans 450 acres on Kauai, with a kids club and an array of authentic cultural programming, like ukulele lessons, Hawaiian language lessons, scavenger hunts, and lei-making workshops. One of the most popular programs for kids is at the Farm at Hokuala: It teaches them about the history and significance of traditional crops brought from Polynesian settlers. They get to taste fruits and plants, like the farm's "ice cream bean," and pet the resident bunnies.
